Maria Reyes: Volunteer Coordinator Handoff

Outgoing coordinator: Maria Reyes

Time in role: six years, fictional profile

Incoming owner: Jordan Lee

Supporting manager: Sam Rivera

Handoff date: October 31, 2026

Status: Draft, requires review and explicit publication

The knowledge we cannot afford to lose

For six years, Maria has welcomed people at the pantry, filled open shifts, trained leads, and noticed the small things that keep a distribution running smoothly. The procedure documents carry most of the written rules, but Maria also knows where new volunteers get confused, which handoffs are most fragile, and which questions should be escalated.

Maria's last day is October 31, 2026. Jordan Lee is the incoming coordinator. Until the handoff is approved, Maria remains a source contributor and Jordan should not treat an unfinished draft as policy.

Four things Jordan must be able to do independently

1. Welcome a first-time volunteer at the blue welcome table by 8:30 a.m.
2. Collect monthly availability by the 15th and finalize shift coverage by the 22nd.
3. Confirm a returning trained buddy is available for each first-time volunteer.
4. Send shift reminders two days before each scheduled distribution.

These timings come from Volunteer Welcome and First Shift and Monthly Volunteer Scheduling. The provider files are evidence; the OrgFlow procedures become authoritative only after a staff member reviews and publishes them.

Maria's unofficial routine

Maria arrives early enough to look at the day's staffing plan before the door opens. She watches for gaps between the welcome desk and produce, and she knows when a first-time volunteer needs another example rather than another explanation. She writes down recurring questions at the end of the shift so Jordan can improve the guide. These are process habits, not personal performance judgments.

Where everything lives

Operations / Volunteer Welcome and First Shift is the onboarding source.

Operations / Monthly Volunteer Scheduling is the monthly planning source.

Operations / Volunteer Availability October.csv is the nonidentifying roster example.

Operations / Building Safety and Cold Chain is the stop-and-ask safety reference.

The shared calendar includes volunteer shifts and scheduling milestones. The demonstration ICS file does not imply an implemented live calendar sync.

What remains unresolved

Which of the four trained leads can cover both Wednesday and Friday?

Who approves station consolidation if Sam is unavailable?

Where should late cancellation feedback be recorded?

Do the shift reminders need a plain-language accessibility variant?

Leave these questions visible as gaps. Do not let a language model invent answers.

Successor checklist

- [ ] Jordan locates the approved onboarding and scheduling documents.
- [ ] Maria demonstrates a first-shift welcome.
- [ ] Jordan checks roster availability and the trained lead list.
- [ ] Jordan practices a cancellation and coverage change.
- [ ] Sam confirms the emergency escalation contact.
- [ ] Maria and Jordan review the recorded handoff transcript.
- [ ] Jordan corrects the draft procedure and names an owner.
- [ ] A staff member explicitly publishes the reviewed handoff.
- [ ] Jordan completes a supervised shift independently.

Knowledge transfer is not automatic publication

An AI system can collect notes and prepare a structured draft. Maria and Jordan must review details, source references, and unresolved questions before any procedure becomes published. Mark the outdated September arrival time as superseded by the October 6 guide.

Approval log

Prepared as a fictional demonstration source on October 11, 2026. No real person's departure, tenure or employment details are asserted. Reviewer: Jordan Lee. Final approver: Sam Rivera. Pending signatures and publication.
